'Catch and release' to limit a feral cat colony

Group traps colony of cats near Southport convenience marked, pays to get them sterilized

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A small group of West Sacramento kindred spirits gathered behind Southport's Tower Mart on Sunday, February 1, to turn loose about 15 feral cats that they had trapped and then spayed and neutered.

The effort sprung from an experience by Patti Kenney, a local pet sitter, one night just over a month earlier right at the edge of the same parking lot.

"It was December," recalled Kenney. "It was dark and on was on my way to Bridgeway to do an overnight pet-sit. I went into the deli, and when I came out, there were all these pairs of eyes staring at me from the dark. I counted 12 of them."

Kenney walked to the edge of the market's parking lot, where it adjoins a vacant field. She found signs that others had been leaving food for a colony of feral cats.

"There's regular folks that come by," said Kenney. "When I saw that, I said to them, 'These cats need to be trapped to stop them multiplying.'"

Some of the folks who were feeding the animals volunteered to help. The group borrowed raccoon-style traps from the SPCA in Sacramento.

"We started with eight traps," reported volunteer "Margaret" (who asked that her last name not be used). "You can borrow two traps per person."

Over the month of January, the group set out the baited cages and hauled in most of the animals. The cats weren't immediately spayed and neutered, for fear that they would just end up getting re-trapped. Instead, Kenney temporarily collected them.

"They stayed in my spare bedroom," she said. "All of them were in my spare bedroom."

She thinks they were unable to trap only about two of the cats.

Members of the cat posse contributed cash to pay the fees to have the animals spayed or neutered and also treated for fleas by the SPCA.

"We had donations of $340 or something like that," reported Kenney. "I'm pretty sure I spent it all."

On the afternoon of Feb. 1, this handful of cat-fanciers showed up for the big day. The cats — probably anxious and nervous — were hunkered down in pet cages in the back of a vehicle.

The volunteers carried the cages over to the edge of the parking lot, where the cats would be able to make a run for it into "their" field.

Many of the animals were reluctant to leave their cages, and had to be gently coaxed or even "poured" from their cages. But sooner or later, each one finally headed out for the green grass of the Southport field.

They were still feral — escaped or abandoned from local homes, perhaps — but at least they wouldn't be reproducing and contributing to a growing colony.

The News-Ledger asked Kenney whether she had plans to head up the same kind of effort at any of the other cat colonies in West Sacramento — there have been reports of a lot of cats near shopping centers at Enterprise Boulevard and Lake Washington Boulevard, for example.

"No," said Kenney. "This was a one time thing for me."

River City High School students attended a driving awareness presentation held by the driver's education teacher, Shannon Woods, in partnership with Impact Teen Driving, an organization that was founded in response to the high frequency of crashes involving teens to which California Highway Patrol (CHP) officers respond.

The goal of the organization is to reduce the number of injuries and deaths suffered by teens as a result of distracted driving and poor decision making. According to their website, impactteendrivers.org, 4,000 teens die each year due to vehicle collision, that's roughly 11 per day. 75% of it is not related to drugs and alcohol but due to distractions such as cell phones or applying make-up.

"I've worked in many areas and on average, in a big area you'll see 5 crashes [per day] from minor property damage to fatality," said Officer Martine Olivares, who also talked about how cell phones are a common distraction while driving. In fact, a majority of the calls he gets about teen vehicle collisions are caused by distracted driving.

Where's Walter Cronkite when you need him?

If you've been following the news lately, you've probably seen some of the reports about longtime NBC Nightly News anchor Brian Williams being outed over falsely claiming to have been in a helicopter that had been hit by a rocket-propelled grenade during the Iraq War. Williams, who has been anchoring the popular NBC Nightly News for more than a decade, has apologized for "inadvertently conflating" parts of a false story he has been publically telling since 2003, making it appear as if he had been in a helicopter he said was "almost blown out of the sky."

He has used words and phrases like "misremembered" and "fog of war" to help explain away what is basically a highly-respected journalist "lying for the purpose of self-aggrandizement", but for many, an apology does not seem like enough. In fact, Tom Brokaw, who was NBC's anchorman before Williams arrived on the scene, has reportedly called for Williams to be fired, and many military veterans who take their combat service seriously think Williams should go, too. But as I write this, it looks like Williams, who recently signed a new $10 million a year contract with NBC News to continue anchoring his top-rated show, won't be going anywhere soon. NBC seems to be hoping the whole thing will blow over in time, and in today's world, it probably will.

It's hard to know nowadays if trustwor-

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

thiness and moral authority actually mean all that much when it comes to reporting the news. But there was a time when all of that was different, which brings me to my little story.

My father was a very hard-working man and he didn't have a lot of spare time to sit around and read newspapers and magazines, but he always wanted to be informed on the issues of the day and I can clearly remember him particularly wanting to know everything that was going on in the 1956 presidential election. Being a veteran of World War II, he was torn between being an admirer of General Dwight D. Eisenhower (the Republican incumbent that year) and Adlai Stevenson (the Democratic candidate), who was a strong supporter of union issues, which my father really cared about because it was his Southern Pacific Railroad union which had helped him get and keep a decent job to support his family after he had returned from the war. So, during the political conventions that year, my father would turn on the television and watch them from gavel to gavel, and for reasons I didn't understand at the time (I was only 9 years old) he always wanted to get his information from Walter Cronkite. And when I asked him many years later why that was, he said simply, "Because the man always told you the truth — no crap — just the truth. You could trust him."

So, from my earliest days, when it was time for the family to sit down after dinner and watch the evening news, it was Walter Cronkite who was seated behind his CBS desk and reporting it. Every once in a while my father would turn on the NBC News with Chet Huntley and David Brinkley because he thought Brinkley had the best sense of humor of all the network news anchors back then. But when there was a really important news story being reported, he only wanted to hear it from Cronkite. So whether it was the Vietnam War, or the Cuban Missile Crisis, or the assassination of President Kennedy, or the break-in at Watergate, or the first landing on the moon, it was always Cronkite who gave my family all the important and newsworthy details.

In viewer opinion polls taken back in the 1960s and 1970s, when Cronkite was at the top of his game, he was often cited as "the most trusted man in America" and it's almost impossible to imagine someone in broadcast news today even being mentioned in that context. In fact, what passes nowadays for the so-called news media seems incapable of disseminating factual and unbiased information to the voters and citizens of this nation. Instead, we have somehow established dueling right-wing and left-wing 24-hours news organizations with mean-spirited talking-heads hardly able to understand (much less appreciate) points of view other than their own.

There is something really scary going on in this country. Not only are informative daily newspapers disappearing left and right, but more and more people (especially young people) are getting what little news they're interested in from sources out to entertain them, not inform them. Worse yet, too many of our citizens are simply surrounding themselves with like-thinking people and basically calling it a life. They don't want their views challenged, they simply want them reinforced and accepted by all, and anything short of that is unacceptable to them. And without news journalists we can both trust and admire, this descent into news mediocrity will only continue to accelerate.

It seems to me that there is hardly anything more scary (and dangerous) than poorly informed people (or nations) that are absolutely convinced that they have all the right on their side. And it also seems to me that this wonderful land of ours is in desperate need of men like Walter Cronkite, who for almost two decades was able to sit behind a desk and calmly give his country all the important facts they needed to better understand their world. No spin, no nauseating bias, just the truth as best he and his fine news organization could discern it. And it's a sad day if we have reached a point where the top-rated news anchor in the whole country is into "stolen valor" and being less than truthful when he opens his mouth.

As I conclude this column on a rainy Sunday night, Williams has decided to take a temporary leave of absence from his network duties and NBC has launched an internal investigation that will also supposedly look into other stories Williams has reported, trying to discern if he has a history of being dishonest with his 9 million nightly viewers. But however all of that turns out, in the final analysis, a free people can only remain so if they have access to quality journalism and trustworthy reporters, and Brian Williams can no longer hope to be considered part of that noble undertaking.

Local seniors looking for a little help with garden

By Al Zagofsky
Correspondent

If your green thumbs are itching for the first signs of spring, and you'd like to help out a couple of seniors who love a flower garden but just need a little help, then read on.

Mary Olbrich and Ray Ledesma have been taking care of a tiny plot of land, and turning it into a pocket park by growing 20 large potted plants in the shade of a Cinnamomum camphora at Riverbend Manor's senior housing in the Broderick section of West Sacramento.

As many of the seniors do not get out much, even more so stay in their apartments most of the day, this pocket park serves as a place to meet visitors, to meet neighbors, or to sit quietly and contemplate the outdoors.

Mary, the more practical of the two, calls the pocket park ad hoc committee the Cummings Garden Group, because the garden is located just off Cummings Way.

Ray, the more poetic of the two coordinators, calls the project My Gate to Heaven. Also helping when the garden are Artis Graham and Rosemary Martinez.

"We are just a bunch of people trying to do a volunteer project," Mary explained. "We have flowers and herbs. Everything is raised—and there is a trellis."

"We started the plants in pots as it was to be a container garden. As the plants matured, they needed more room," Mary said. "There is quite a bit of replanting that we have to do. The Geraniums and Pelargoniums need re-potting, and we planted lemongrass in the herb garden and it really took off."

Years ago, the city repurposed an elementary school for senior housing and in the development set aside office space for the Parks and Recreation Department. A member of the department began the garden project, but the project was abandoned when Parks and Recreation relocated. When the fledgling pocket park study going to seed, that's when several residents sought to salvage the effort and create the pocket garden.

The opportunity spoke to Mary, largely because Mary has had a green thumb from the age of five when she helped the family in their Victory Garden during World War II.

"When we did something wrong, my parents would send us out to weed the garden as punishment," said Mary. "I never told them, but I really enjoyed weeding the garden."

Ray grew up in the Clarksburg farming area. "My father taught me how to irrigate plants the old Spanish-style way. We grew everything from chilies to zucchini."

When his parents grew older, Ray explained, "I built a garden because I wanted my parents to have a connection to heaven—because that's where they were headed."

The pocket park planters are looking for help from anyone who could volunteer an hour a week. Also they could use some large plastic planting pots and soil—and or someone with a vehicle to transport it. They are not looking for additional plants.

They are also looking for some help trimming roses around the development. "We have a couple of yellow and lavender roses—one has a gorgeous scent when it is in bloom," Mary noted. Until recently, Mary had been trimming the roses, but she's currently in a wheelchair and the wheelchair get stuck in the dirt or topples on sloping surfaces.

Ray Ledesma & Mary Emma Olbrich have been taking care of a tiny plot of land, and turning it into a pocket park. If your green thumbs are itching to help out a couple of seniors who love to flower garden but just need a little help, then read on. (Photo by Al Zagofsky)

That's another reason that Mary enjoys the garden. "My energy level goes way up when I'm out here, and I'm not as sleepy the rest of the day. Especially in the summer time when the plants bloom. The yellow rose bush is incredible—it just blooms and blooms."

Mary is looking for volunteers at any level of expertise from unfamiliar to master gardener.

Black History Month: African-American spirituals at Yolo branch

From Beth Gabor
County of Yolo

In honor of Black History Month, Lellingby Boyce will perform "My Grandmother, The Great Migration and African-American Spirituals" on Sunday, February 15, 2:00-3:00 p.m. in the Blanchard Room of the Mary L. Stephens Davis Branch Library, located at 315 E. 14th Street in Davis.

"My Grandmother, The Great Migration and African-American Spirituals" is the story of Boyce's grandmother and the historical Great Migration that altered her grandmother's life. The Great Migration was the movement of six million African-Americans out of the rural Southern United States to the urban Northeast, Midwest and West.

Boyce's earlier public performances feature African-American spirituals and storytelling. Since then, she has presented recitals of songs and operatic arias and lively audience-participation programs of Broadway's gems. "My Grandmother, The Great Migration and African-American Spirituals" is a richly tapestried program of history and personal memories, accompanied by a musical score of sing-alongs.

No reservations are required. The Blanchard Room of the Mary L. Stephens Branch Library is accessible for persons with disabilities. Presented by the Yolo County Library, all programs free. For more information about this program, call (530) 757-5598.

Preserve the legacy.

Make sure West Sacramento is served by a first-class local newspaper and information source for decades to come.

A West Sacramento nonprofit group has tasked itself with creating a unique community-run news organization.

The new organization will use print media, radio and the internet to serve this community into the future. It will start from the traditions of pioneering West Sacramento journalist Julius Feher, the late founder of the News-Ledger.

You can help.

As the tax year ends, and as you consider your estate plans, please think about making a tax-deductible gift for the future of West Sacramento journalism. Your gift may help create a vigorous new news hub for your city as well as support the teaching of journalism skills in local schools and college classrooms.

What can you do?

- ♦ Write a tax-deductible check to "West Sacramento Neighbors Fair, Inc."
- ♦ Maximize your tax deductions now by giving gifts of cash, bonds or appreciated assets such as stocks or real estate.
- ♦ Pursue tax advantages while protecting your security by using options like Charitable Gift Annuities, a Charitable Remainder Trust or Charitable Lead Trust.
- ♦ Create a Donor Advised Fund and help decide how your major donation is used – while achieving maximum tax advantages.
- ♦ Make a bequest, and leave a legacy.

The project seeks to raise an immediate 'seed fund' of $15,000. Talk to your tax advisor and contact us about how to help our West Sacramento media and journalism project. Your gift may be publicized; let us know if you'd prefer not.

Joke of the week:

A frog telephoned the psychic hotline and is told, "You are going to meet a beautiful young girl who will find you fascinating and want to know everything about you."

The frog says, "This is great! It's what I've always wished for! I'm going to a party next Saturday -- will I meet her there?"

"No," says the psychic. "Next semester, in her biology class."

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Big Hero 6" (PG) -- This Disney animated feature takes us to the futuristic fictional metropolis of San Fransokyo, where a bunch of tech whizzes (and their inflatable robot) build themselves into superheros to battle a Kabuki-masked supervillain. The heart and soul of the supergroup is 14-year-old Hiro (voiced by Ryan Potter) and a doughy, adorable robot caregiver named Baymax (Scott Adsit).

It hits all the notes you'd expect from a Disney super-adventure -- a kid for the kids to relate to, a goofy show-stealing sidekick, quirky supporting characters, vulnerable feelings and dazzling animated action sequences. While the characters are loosely adapted from a lesser level of the Marvel Comics world, this world fits in with genre demands while still bringing a refreshing energy to the screen.

"Whiplash" (R) -- A gifted young jazz drummer gets pushed to his furthest edges by a merciless music teacher so sadistic and single-minded that you'll be scared of him too. Andrew (Miles Teller) is a prodigy behind a drum kit, and he's determined to reach the highest level at his musical conservatory. He catches the attention of the school's most feared and respected teacher, Terence (J.K. Simmons), who immediately starts with the mindgames, working Andrew to the bone and

The performances are downright amazing. The central pair have such a dynamic going -- are they teacher-and-student, tormentor-and-prisoner, father-and-son? J.K. Simmons has, until this point, been known for bit dad roles and insurance commercials. Now he's buried in awards from this outstanding breakthrough role.

"Beyond the Lights" (R) -- This touching romance follows Noni (Gugu Mbatha-Raw), a pop singer about to take over the charts with her astounding voice and full-scale sex appeal. Trouble is, stardom and objectification aren't all Noni was told they would be by her overbearing stage mom (Minnie Driver). When things seem darkest and Noni can't take it anymore, she's rescued by a hunky, virtuous cop named Kaz (Nate Parker).

Even when the plot wears thin, the performances and directing give it gravity it needs.

"Horrible Bosses 2" (R) -- Jason Bateman, Charlie Day and Jason Sudeikis are reunited as the three bumbling revenge-plotting pals from the pretty good 2011 prequel. The trio is trying to launch a small business -- selling some silly invention -- when they get swindled by Bert Hanson (Christoph Waltz), a big businessman who said he could help them succeed. Our protagonists decide to kidnap Hanson's playboy son (Chris Pine). Unfortunately, while the leads still have their comedy chemistry, a confused script strangles the humor and pushes things into a more predictable territory.

"Spinster"

by Kate Bolick
(Crown, $12.99)

Reviewed by Molly Ford

There are 158 million women in the United States, and 102 million of them are single. In this groundbreaking new book, based off a 2011 Atlantic magazine cover story, Kate Bolick examines why, how and what the future holds for the growing number of these women.

Guided by her own journey as a single woman and her experiences as a writer in New York City, Bolick's stories give color and life to the statistics she shares about being a single woman in America.

To give a more complete view of single women throughout American history, Bolick weaves in anecdotes from her late mother's life and also profiles five pioneering women from the past century who have defined and embodied being single. These women include such notables as journalist Neith Boyce and essayist Maeve Brennan.

Bolick has richly researched each of these "awakeners," as she calls them. By including quotes from their original work, visiting their homes and talking to surviving relatives and friends, "Spinster" becomes as much a historical read as a commentary on contemporary singleness.

And although it's the title of her book, Bolick puts the somewhat derogatory label of "spinster" to rest for good, showing how single women have been a rich, if slightly ignored, part of American history, and how they are influencing culture and lifestyles choices across the country today.

If you want to know more about this powerful and intriguing demographic shaping life in America, this is your read.

A Mad "Dash" to a Healthy Diet

Every year, the gluttony of the holidays combined with our good intentions for a new year have us making over our grocery lists, our pantries and our diets. Since the beginning of mass media and modern food production, there have been "fad" diets -- recipes and meal plans to help you do everything from simply losing weight to fighting off major illnesses.

In the United States we have either too much food and are inclined to eat poorly, or we have too little of it and are forced by circumstances to eat poorly. People who find themselves eating out are frequently served portions that exceed dietary recommendations and are overloaded with fat, protein and carbs. Those on limited incomes may be eating out, but it's most likely fast food or less expensive, highly processed foods. In the end, we all eat to live, and our diets are a vital part of our physical health. It's important for everyone to make the best food choices possible.

Some people are disciplined enough to eat modest amounts of whole foods. Others, however, appreciate more guidance, and that's where a diet plan comes in. When considering a specialized diet, make sure it's based on studied and proven science. It's also important that the diet is one you begin as a plan but continue as a long-term way of thinking about food and eating.

The DASH diet (which stands for Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension) was developed through research funded by the U.S. National Institutes of Health as a way to lower blood pressure and reduce the use of medication. Studies dating back to its inception in 1993 show that it's an effective way to lose weight and reduce the risk of many diseases.

The DASH diet plan offers a path to change eating habits and improve health. It's also a simple, delicious and a sustainable approach to healthy eating. The key to the DASH plan is portion size and a wide variety of foods with proper nutrients. The food is delicious, whole and healthy. It's more than a plan; it's a way to respect and care for our bodies while enjoying a good meal.

This recipe for Trout Veracruz is based on a Mexican seafood favorite from the port city of Veracruz. It's a colorful, nutrition-packed, one-skillet meal that is easy to prepare and fits in beautifully with the DASH diet regimen.

TROUT VERACRUZ

2 pounds trout filets, boneless and without skin
2 tablespoons fresh-squeezed lemon juice
1 tablespoon lemon zest
1 1/2 pounds fresh tomatoes
1/4 cup green olives stuffed with pimientos
1 jalapeno pepper
4 tablespoons olive oil
1 1/2 cups medium chopped onions
1 1/2 cups chopped zucchini
2 cloves garlic, diced
1 tablespoon fresh chopped parsley (use 1/2 tablespoon if dried)
1 tablespoon capers
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon fresh chopped

mint (use 1/2 tablespoon if dried)
1 tablespoon fresh chopped thyme (use 1/2 tablespoon if dried)
1/2 cup toasted, chopped almonds

1. Place trout fillets in a small dish and coat with lemon zest and lemon juice. Core, seed and finely dice the tomatoes. Cut green olives into halves; seed the jalapeno pepper, cut into thin strips and set aside.

2. In a large skillet, heat olive oil on medium heat; saute the tomatoes, onion, zucchini and garlic. Cook till the onion is tender. Add jalapeno pepper, green olives, parsley, capers, bay leaf, mint and thyme. Heat sauce until just boiling.

3. Add trout fillets with lemon zest and remaining lemon juice to skillet. Cover, reduce heat to a simmer. Cook 15 minutes or until trout fillets easily flake. Remove bay leaf and discard. Place trout fillets and vegetables on a platter, and cover with foil to keep warm.

4. Cook remaining sauce for 2-3 minutes until reduced by half. Pour reduced sauce over trout fillets with the vegetables. Sprinkle with almonds and serve. Serves 4.

GUEST COMMENTARY:

Measles: why the fuss?

By Yolo County Health Officer
Constance Caldwell, M.D.

There has been a lot in the news about a recent outbreak of measles linked to a Disney amusement park in Orange County, with now over 70 cases confirmed in California and several in other states as well. What is measles and who is at risk? Who exactly needs to be vaccinated?

Measles is a very contagious disease caused by a virus. It begins with fever, followed by cough, runny nose, sore throat and pink eyes, and then a whole body rash. When someone with measles coughs or sneezes, the droplets are spread in the air and stay very infectious for up to 2 hours. People are contagious from 4 days before they develop rash to 4 days after the rash starts.

Most recover within 2 weeks, but measles can cause a lot of nasty complications including pneumonia, brain swelling and occasionally blindness or deafness. In the days of widespread measles in the U.S., about 1 in 1,000 died. The death rate is often much higher in other countries, particularly where children are undernourished.

Although nearly eliminated in the U.S. by 2000, measles is still widespread in many parts of the world. Recent outbreaks in the U.S. have been tied to foreign travel, particularly from the Philippines. A traveler with measles can unwittingly infect anyone not vaccinated. In 2014, there were over 50,000 cases of measles and over 100 related deaths in the Philippines, and several thousand cases each in Angola, Brazil, China, Indonesia, Nigeria and Vietnam, to name a few.

CONSTANCE CALDWELL
Yolo County Health Officer

Fortunately, the measles vaccine has been around since the 1960s and the combined measles-mumps-rubella (MMR) vaccine used now was introduced in 1971. In the wake of a large measles outbreak in 1989, a second dose of MMR was recommended. The first dose of MMR vaccine is usually given around one year of age, and a second dose upon school entry at age 4 or 5.

Who should be vaccinated? If you were born before 1957 (like this author), you are generally presumed to be immune since you lived through multiple measles epidemics before vaccine was available. At least 95% of us in that generation had the disease and have lifelong immunity. If you were born in the U.S. after 1970, and attended elementary school in the U.S., you were very likely vaccinated against measles unless your parents refused vaccine for you. If you served in the U.S. military, you were almost certainly vaccinated. If you are a legal immigrant who came to the U.S. after 1996, you are also likely vaccinated.

If you do not fit into one of the above groups, and do not have your childhood vaccine card, it would be wise to discuss testing for measles immunity or getting MMR vaccine with your clinic or physician. If you are a health care worker, college student or planning travel abroad, there may be additional recommendations for MMR vaccine.

In recent years, record numbers of parents have regrettably been refusing some or all vaccines for their children. If you are a young adult who knows your parents did not have you vaccinated, this is a great time to speak to your health care provider about getting vaccinated. If you are a parent and you did not have your children vaccinated, this is a great time to rethink that choice for their health and the health of community.
